

PRP Announces Relocation to New Facility and Promotion of Key Executive

PRP is positioned for continued growth with new facility and promotion of key executive.

Irvine, CA, January 12, 2010 - Today PRP announced its plans to move into a new facility located at 2995 Red Hill Avenue, Costa Mesa, California. This move almost doubles PRP's current square footage and demonstrates impressive continued growth. PRP is a National Consulting Firm headquartered in Orange County, California with a client base that spans every major location in North America. "This is the fourth move in our twelve year history. The move signifies the confidence we have that our client base will continue to grow, creating more opportunities for our current employees and additional employment opportunities at PRP," said Donald Steiner, CEO of PRP.

Additionally, the company today announced the promotion of Jeremy Linehan to Vice President, Solutions Management. "Jeremy has made a substantial impact on PRP's growth during his eight years here," stated Bill Carpou, Executive Vice President of PRP. "Our Solutions Management capabilities provide a clear and measurable difference, surpassing the features of our perceived competitors, or a client's attempt to implement similar solutions on their own. Under Jeremy's leadership, this significant part of our business will continue to provide clients with sustainable results, new areas of savings and continuous compliance management." Mr. Linehan, a graduate of University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA), will continue to lead the Solutions Management group from the company's new headquarters.
